

Being dictated to by a minority ?

Independent research shows that the vast majority of Australians believe that terminally and incurably ill patients with profound suffering should have the right to choose to die in a dignified manner and at a time of their own choosing.

The majority of people agree, regardless of religion.

That right does not currently exist. Nothing will change until politicians hear from the majority instead of just a vocal minority.

Let politicians know of your support—Dying With Dignity Victoria makes it so easy to do!
